big, Irish fellow. It might have been Burke, I don't know. I would not swear who it was. I introduced myself to him and he and I talked a half hour about Jersey City and the police department down there, you know, and he said Simpson had gone, taken his car and gone to Jersey City. I asked him to tally, that I wanted to change it, but he did not do it.

Q Then your error made in your sworn statement to the effect that it was Friday instead of Thursday, as you now recall it, was never changed? A. It was Thursday instead of Friday.

Q It was never changed? A. It was never changed. My sworn statement says Friday the 14th.

Q But you informed one of the detectives immediately after the statement was sworn to that you wanted it changed?

A Yes, I asked--they laid it there and I seen it. But they came to me and I got talking with the fellows, out there, with different people. Why, they said that was Thursday. It was not Friday. Then, I saw where I had erred.

Q Then did you write to Simpson after that asking him to change it? A. No, not in reference to this, no, I did not. The only communication after this was in reference to my friends' and relatives' affidavits.

Q How did this error as to the day of the week come about,
